Teaching English Effectively — Maximizing English Use in the Classroom —

2019年6月20日 (木)

茶話会：17:00～17:30 11号館11204教室

講演会：17:40～19:10 11号館11203教室

Professor Emeritus Harris G. Ives (茨城キリスト教大学名誉教授)

Professor Ives has been working for Ibaraki Christian University for 40 years. His specialty is American Literature. His words, "Teaching is my career, and teaching is my hobby," explain his enjoyable activities which emphasize fun in the learning process.

Professor Miho Murakami (現代英語学科教授)

Professor Murakami's research interests include language acquisition through TBLT (Task-Based Language Teaching), language policies, and language proficiency assessment. She worked for municipal junior high schools in Kyoto City for a decade prior to her teaching at universities.

Lecture Contents:

This collaborative lecture-workshop is about language acquisition through the use of English in the classroom. Professor Ives' session will be preceded by Professor Murakami's brief lecture on current findings about language learning in this field. Participants are expected to actively perform in English during the workshop, experiencing the authentic use of English which leads to the acquisition of the language.
